

Substantive application has been lodged by Charlie Gard's parents; and interim measure is maintained pending proceedings on the case

This evening, the European Court of Human Rights has received a substantive application in the case Gard and Others v. the United Kingdom (no. 39793/17).

Therefore, in accordance with its earlier decision of 13 June 2017, adopted under Rule 39 of the Rules of Court \(continuing the decision of the Single Judge of 9 June 2017\), the interim measure indicated to the United Kingdom Government must be maintained until such time as the European Court makes its decision on the substantive application. Under this interim measure, the United Kingdom Government has been requested, in the meantime, to ensure that Charlie Gard, a baby suffering from a rare genetic disease, is provided with such treatment and nursing care as may be appropriate to ensure that he suffers the least distress and retains the greatest dignity consistent, insofar as possible, with maintaining life.

In light of the exceptional circumstances of this case, the Court has already accorded it priority and will treat the application with the utmost urgency. It is anticipated that as soon as the responsible Chamber of the Court is in a position to consider the application made on behalf of Charlie Gard and his parents an expedited timetable for the determination of this application will be established.

What are interim measures?

The Court may, under Rule 39 of its Rules of Court, indicate interim measures to any State party to the Convention. Interim measures are urgent measures which, according to the Court's well-established practice, apply only where there is an imminent risk of irreparable harm. Such measures are decided in connection with proceedings before the Court, without prejudging any subsequent decisions on the admissibility or merits of the case in question. The Court grants such requests only on an exceptional basis, when the applicants would otherwise face a real risk of irreversible harm. For further information, see the Factsheet on interim measures.
